Tickle

Author's Notes:
This was going to be for a drabble challenge, but morphed into something else entirely.

I might be addicted to Tony's laugh.

That nasal, half hiccup of air that fills his lungs when I tickle him in bed.

The way his body trembles with giggles under my merciless fingers.

His arms trying in vain to push my hands away and failing.

I stop to wait for him to catch his breath. I may enjoy the sound of his laughter, but I don't want to push too far.

A devious grin curls on his lips, shoving me on the bed to attack me with his own brand of tickling.

And I fall for it every time.
